President's News Article

Dear IFYE Alumni and Friends,

As October draws to a close your IFYE Leadership Team including the IFYE Board and IFYE Staff are hard at work on your behalf.

At the request of Agriculture Future of America (AFA) and approval of the IFYE Board at the June Atlanta

IFYE Conference meeting, preparation and conducting of several possible events are scheduled for the remainder of 2015. Rest assured that the core values understood by IFYE alumni will not change. But, adaptation is necessary if IFYE is going to grow and sustain itself. The balance of this article will explain what is scheduled and happening in the remainder of 2015. Please visit our IFYEUSA.ORG website for updated information.

In July, an IFYE Design Team meeting was held at Agriculture Future of America's (AFA) Headquarters in Kansas City. The Design Team was valuable in providing an external perspective of various components of the IFYE Program. Questions such as "What makes IFYE unique?" were studied along with pressing questions concerning numbers of participants, current capacity and future goals. Issues concerning marketing, fundraising and finance, as well as IFYE's ability to successfully measure successes and outcomes, were addressed. The discussion then turned to the potential cooperative aspects between IFYE and AFA, perceived benefits to students, as well as those possible linkages with corporations and universities' international programs. The Design Team then brainstormed potential IFYE experiences that would incorporate each of these entities.

The following recommendations were made to IFYE:

- Share Design Team work with the IFYE Board and request Board approval for continuance of process. (This was completed and approved 8/9/15.)

- Hold a Focus Group of College juniors and seniors on their "Needs and Expectations of an International Experience." (This was held August 11 with Alan Lambert and Mike Coates meeting with AFA leadership and 8 AFA Student Advisors.)
- Share Design Team work and Student Focus group recommendations with the IFYE Board at the September 2015 Strategic Planning meeting in Indianapolis. The purpose is to consider incorporating recommendations into IFYE Programming and to be prepared to participate in a Think Tank in early November 2015.
- Develop measurement tools to assess growth and development of those participating in the IFYE experience.
- Identify strategic partners or perspectives to include in the planning process or "Think Tank".
- Conduct a "Think Tank" as a follow-up to the Design Team. Include additional students, university representatives and industry leaders. Outcomes to include specific programming ideas and methods to achieve those ideas.

In early September, the IFYE Board met in Indianapolis to spend three days addressing the Strategic Plan. A facilitator was secured to lead the Board through the process. The Summary from the Design Team and Report from the Focus Group provided helpful information as the Board continues the transition from an "Operational Board" to a "Governance Board".

It should be noted that until 2013, the IFYE Board had concerned itself solely with the IFYE Alumni. In 2013, the Board voted to take on full responsibility to administer and grow the IFYE Program. By taking on this additional responsibility, the Board began shifting to an entirely new role, one of running a non-profit business---the business of an international exchange program. This has been a major shift requiring numerous hours of staff and Board time to bring the organization to a healthy functioning point. The Design Team, Strategic Planning Sessions and Think Tank are all part of the plan to continue to move the Board and the IFYE organization to a more efficient, secure and expanding position.

The Board continues to need your input and support as Board Members do the heavy lifting of making this major change in the IFYE Association of the USA, Inc. Please do not hesitate to call us or email us---you can easily find any of us at ifyeusa.org We look forward to hearing from you!!

Conversations and Promotions of future IFYE Partnerships and Programs

During the summer and early fall, I

- Attended European IFYE Conference in Scotland during August
- Traveled to other European countries to visit face-to-face with IFYE Coordinators in partner countries. These conversations with current participating countries were held to better understand their program, structure, staffing, and program viability. Both partners and USA wish to encourage return to longer exchange program lengths, rather than less than two months. Countries are facing similar challenges as the US in regards to finding qualified applicants, funding sources, host family recruitment, etc.

Outlook for 2016

- I have been engaging in positive conversations for potential 2016 exchanges with Costa Rica and India, and perhaps selected countries in Southeast Asia, Western and Eastern Europe, Central and South America, and Africa. Many of these are long-term processes, but initial conversations are beginning.
- The national IFYE Association has been promoting the IFYE program and exhibiting at trade show booths at the National FFA Convention and the Agriculture Future of America Leaders Conference this fall. We have also gathered contact information from interested individuals for follow-up on future exchanges.

My Life in Finland

Dakoda Harris, Virginia

I embarked on my IFYE journey with a national orientation of inbound and outbound delegates in Atlanta. Not only did I have a chance to meet other adventurous young adults looking forward to new cultural experiences, but because the orientation was held in conjunction with the annual National IFYE Conference, I met a number of previous exchangees who shared about their time in a variety of host countries.

I departed from Atlanta to Finland for three months in this Scandinavian country that is bordered by Russia on the east and Sweden and Norway on the north. Finland is the 8th largest country in Europe, and its capital, Helsinki, is the northernmost capital in the world. The population is 5 ½ million and the majority live in the south. The northernmost part of the country has a population of Laplanders, a group of people that I would compare to Eskimos. Finnish is spoken by 90% of the people; however, Swedish is spoken by a minority of people, most of whom live near Sweden in the southwest. The Laplanders have their own language, too. Finnish is a difficult language that is similar to Hungarian, I am told. Luckily for me, many Finns speak English.

After a country orientation in Helsinki, I went to my first host family. I was excited but a little nervous to be on my way. Since then I have had 3 host families, and they have all been great.

I lived on two dairy farms and a horse farm. I learned a lot about running a dairy farm and the dairy industry in general. The average dairy farm has 25 cows, but they use modern milking machinery, and the barn is very clean. A truck comes to take the milk every couple of days. Besides milk for drinking, the milk is used for making cheese, butter and yogurt. About 1/3 is consumed in Finland and the rest is exported to countries such as Denmark, Germany, and Poland. Most families have dogs, so I was glad of that, since I am a dog lover.

Finland has over 8,800 lakes and lots of forests. I have enjoyed lots of fishing, and I have been rabbit and duck hunting. I brought my guitar with me, and I have enjoyed playing and singing for my new friends. I actually gave a concert in the local town while with my first host family. My host mother made a poster to advertise the concert and it was well attended. Also I have helped to build a horse stable and attended a folk festival as well as an end-of-summer festival.

I also attended a week-long Nordic 4-H Camp. This camp is held every other year in one of the Scandinavian countries. This year Finland was the host, and the theme was “4-H Moving the World”. Over 1,000 young people and leaders attended and it was great fun. Campers came from many countries: Finland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, etc. It was held in Eastern Finland at Hyvarila International Youth Center in Nurmes, Finland. This was on a lake and we could see Russia across on the other side.

We slept in tents with our sleeping bags; the tent areas were divided into area with 100 campers each. The opening ceremony features each region dressing in outlandish clothes and marching as a group with their identifying flag. It was hilarious to see their costumes and crazy antics.

Morning Workshops were divided into categories of “Head, Heart, Hands, and Health”; for example, Head included such choices as Music and Instruments, Stone Game, First Aid, Forestry, Media Workshop, and Traditional Games; Heart had Mission Impossible, Paper Costumes, Hulabaloo and Steps Forward; Hands offered Doll Making, Origami, Wool Picture, Bakery, African Food, and Fruit & Vegetable Carving; and Health choices were Afro-Dance, Hiking, Nature Trail, Fishing, Drumming & Singing, and Traditional Dances.

Clothes making workshop from paper

In the afternoons we went swimming, competed in a volleyball tournament, and played other sports. The teen 4-H group or 15 U.S. delegates and a chaperone through States 4-H Exchange was also at camp, and I was glad to talk with them and hear a little about their experiences in Finland, too. Each evening we had a group program with entertainment, dancing and other activities, which was followed by campfires and singing.

The food in Finland is nutritious and simple without the use of many spices. I enjoy “tea time” when we usually have delicious breads and cakes. Most families take a break or two during the day to enjoy a few minutes of relaxation and the simple joys of tea or coffee with bread and cheese and coffee cakes.

Another thing that I have tried is the Finnish sauna. That deserves an article all of its own, so I will write more about that later.

My free time travel of two weeks begins in a few days, and I plan to go to Norway and Denmark before ending up in my next host country – Austria.

Meeting other IFYEs at National Conference

After a missed flight (thank you Northern Virginia traffic), I made it to Atlanta for the conference. The current IFYEs' orientation lined up with the past IFYEs' national conference this year, so it was a great experience to talk with people who went to Finland by boat and to others who went to India and the Middle East. Everyone had different stories to tell about their time but they all came away with the same feeling - it changed their life in a way that is impossible to describe to people who are not part of the program. Talking with the past IFYEs also helped me become less nervous and more excited for my trip ahead of me!

With all of the new IFYEs, inbounds (those coming to the USA) and outbounds (those going to Europe or Asia), finally in one area we were able to talk a bit before dinner, bond during dinner (a fun experience of describing corn bread and peach cobbler to inbounds), and then played a few get-to-know-you games after dinner. These games were great in the fact that you had to quickly become comfortable with a stranger, a good skill to have when living with host families. The next few days flew by as three past IFYE's provided small workshops; group outings to either farms in Georgia, historic sites or areas used in films; and a cultural dinner and auction on the last night to wrap up the experience. The last night it was time to say goodbye to some great new friends but knowing a great adventure was ahead.

Coming to Eesti (Estonia)

Estonia is part of the Baltic States and a country most Americans have never heard of (I was one). Estonia is situated below Finland and shares a border with Russia to the East, Latvia to the South and the Baltic Sea to the West. The capital is Tallinn. Under Soviet Rule from 1944-1991, Estonians are one of the few countries to gain independence in a non-violent way. 1989 marked one of the biggest years for them with the Singing Revolution, night singing demonstrations at the Tallinn Song Festival grounds, and human chain made up of two million people spreading from Estonia, through Latvia and down to Lithuania. On August 22nd 1991, Iceland became the first country to recognize the newly restored independence of Estonia.

My first host brother had me watch "The Singing Revolution." - a great documentary about life for Estonians during the Soviet times, how they won their freedom and why they sing. I highly recommend it; it taught me about a period of time many schools have to skip over.

I quickly learned two things, Estonians are proud of the fact they gained independence in a non-violent way, and they love to sing. Every five years they hold a singing festival that attracts up to 30,000 singers and up to 80,000 spectators.

It is a small country and somewhat flat, their highest mountain is Suur Munamägi at 318 m (1043 ft), but it is filled with trees and forest and bogs and beaches. I have seen swallows (the national bird) and foxes and one of my most exciting moments was seeing a moose on the side of the road! I cannot wait to see more as I finish out my last month here.

Host Families

Host families are amazing people. They take a complete stranger in from anywhere from a few days to a month and let you become part of their family. Just like families here, they all differ from where they live to what they do to who is part of the family. I have had parents who work for the military and others who are leading villages involved with handicrafts. My current host mom is a music teacher and sings in several different choirs and the dad builds log homes\ saunas. Some have lived in small villages with around 100 residents while another lived about 5 minutes away from Pärnu, the summer capital. All of my host families have asked what I want to do, or what I want to see, I show them my list but always add that if there is something they think I should experience please let me know. The country is small enough, the longest I have been in a car somewhere is 3 hours and we almost went the entire length of the country, that it is almost possible to do it all!

I have been able to climb around the ruins of castles, see the most northern point (if it had been a clear day I would have been able to see Finland), walk in bogs looking for cloudberry (I also got to watch my host mom make a phone call in the middle of the bog), go to the southern area and see the sand caves in Piusa and go to a small island called Kihnu (7 km by 3.3 km, 4 miles by 2 miles).

When we are not traveling around seeing the country we are home. I usually help out with cleaning, gardening, making dinner and helping with dinner. It is funny - at home I never enjoyed cleaning or gardening, and sometimes making dinner, but I loved helping out host moms with these activities and I have grown to actually enjoy gardening!

Food

Every family has asked if I eat meat, the reason they grill out almost every night in the summer. I have had a lot of ribs, chicken, pork all marinated in different things and moose burgers at a mid-summer party. Everyone uses charcoal and they let the fire die down so the meat is more smoked. The biggest difference I have seen is with salads. Usually, to a cabbage base, they will add tomatoes, potatoes or carrots and then use a dressing of sour cream (hapukoor). This sour cream is a bit liquidy. I cannot compare taste because I was not a huge fan of sour cream at home. I have grown to like this though and might miss it when I come home.

The most adventurous food I have eaten is blood sausage. Every time I hear the name, I think of a sausage casing oozing blood, but that is not reality at all! It is filled with barley and I am not sure what else because I liked it and do not want to ruin it. While eating it one of my host brothers, who has it every Christmas, looked it up and was not pleased with what he found out. It is a bit crumbly so I finally learned to eat the insides and then the casing. The weather is so mild here, most days are in the upper 60's- lower 70's, we have only had few days in the 90's and they do not have humidity like Virginia, that one berry season follows the other.

When I arrived at the end of June, it was strawberry and wild strawberries. At the beginning of July, the blueberries came in along with the cloudberry, only found in bogs, and now the raspberries are coming in. Every one of my host families collected each berry and mashed them up for jams and froze them for the winter time. I was lucky and one of my host families took me cloudberry hunting in the bog. We went for a 40-minute hike through the woods with no trails to follow; the dad did it by memory to the edge of the bog. When we got to the area, the mom was a bit worried that we would not find any berries; but after about 10 minutes of searching, we found some! They come in reddish in color and when they are ready they are soft and pillows and orange/yellow in color. They were not my favorite berry because they were kind of creamy in texture, but my host mom made a jam with them and they were much better!

Summer berries

Final Thoughts

I am now with my last host family and leave in less than 20 hrs. Since I last wrote, I have been with two other families and seen the rest of this beautiful country. Estonia is small and the longest I have been in the car is about 3 hrs. Traveling can be very tiring sometimes, but I am always excited when we are (in the car) because it means I get to see more of the country.

I have come to love this small country that I know I would never have visited otherwise. I now get to come home and tell people all about it and hopefully maybe even convince some future IFYE to choose Estonia over the other options. I may not have chosen Estonia but it chose me, and I am so glad for it.

What's next?

August 9th marked my one month left to stay in this beautiful country. I will be off for a two week break. I will be spending about five days in Wales, four days in London and four days in Spain. I will be meeting my sister and friend and have left the planning up to them. My next country will be Switzerland from September 23rd to December 11th.

2015 National IFYE Conference Report

Betty Jo Smith-Roberts

Those attending the 2015 National IFYE Conference in Atlanta from June 17-21 were greeted with warm, sunny Georgia days, a wonderfully accommodating hotel and lots of conversations bringing together old and new friends!!

Eugen Schoenfeld, a holocaust survivor opened the conference proceedings with gripping stories of his experiences. Eugen transported us back to the concentration camps bringing to life the people and events of the time. Those in attendance will long remember his stories and cautions for the future.

The conference sessions offered opportunities to learn more about Georgia History, Georgia Agriculture, an update on the Peace Corp, Youth Development Work in Iraq, and for those of us into food, there was a presentation by a Georgia Grown Chef who provided samples! The exploration of Georgia continued through the conference tours which included an Agricultural tour which explored the Chic Filet's agri-tourism farm and then on to a peach farm and processing plant. The Entertainment tour explored CNN and Fox Theatre while the Historical Tour visited local historical sites in Atlanta. The day culminated with everyone in attendance at the Medieval Times Dinner Theatre. What a show!!!

An auction was held to raise funds for the IFYE program with proceeds of $4835!! What a great show of support for IFYE!!

There were over 30 Inbound and Outbound IFYEs in attendance and once again, they brought energy and enthusiasm to the conference. It was great to visit with them during meals and to hear their country presentations. Their presence was such an immediate reminder of the excitement and challenges that all IFYEs face as they head to their host country.

The business meeting focused on the events of the past year and how the IFYE Board is positioning itself for the future. Time was given to answer questions and receive input from the membership.

It should be noted that this conference was planned and conducted by the IFYE Board with leadership by President Betty Jo Roberts and Vice President Keith Ferris. IFYE Board members and spouses worked to make the conference a success. A great debt of gratitude is sent to all of those individuals who made the conference a reality.

Next August, the National Conference will move to Manhattan, Kansas, home of Kansas State University! We look forward to seeing you there!!

European IFYE Conference - Scotland

Crystal Yonker

Some people are attracted to men and women in uniform. Imagine how much more they gravitate to IFYE Scots in kilts and tartans! The European IFYE Conference in August at Gordonstoun School near Elgin, Scotland held all the magic imaginable.

IFYEs from 19 nations from Europe, Australia, New Zealand and the USA were “piped” (led by bagpipes and drums) into the beautiful Gordonstoun School chapel. Many wore their National Dress for the official opening ceremony. The fabrics, embellishments, colors, and workmanship of National Dress were exquisite from lederhosen to kilts and tartans to dirndls and heavily embroidered wool jumpers.

The official conference photograph and country photographs recorded the beginning of an activity-packed week. Scottish culture was taught through a kilt-making demonstration, crafts, singing, percussion, dousing, dancing, hiking, biking and sports contests. Larry Wachtel (IL) was the hero for his sports team in the playoff championship. Tours to local farms showed current farming and livestock trends. Scottish black face sheep and hairy coos (Highland cows) were popular attractions. Other educational tours were to whiskey distilleries, woollen mills, a cooperage, an abbey inhabited by Benedictine monks, Cawdor Castle, Lossiemouth RAF, and Fort George.

Each host family visit was touted as the very best! After traditional Scottish fish and chips, there was a sunset cruise on Loch Ness. Neither the sun nor “Nessie” were visible.

Robert Burns’ dinner (usually celebrated in January) included the ceremony of the haggis, reading of some of Burns’ works in Scottish dialect, traditional music and songs. All were punctuated with whiskey, providing a “slice” of Scottish tradition. The meal included haggis, neeps and tatties, salmon, new potatoes with basil, fresh green vegetables, cranachan, and cheese and biscuits. ...Aw, me lads and lassies, what an evening!

Evenings were filled with music, dancing, visiting, and a few trips to the IFYE bar.

The week in Northern Scotland was filled with many opportunities to reminisce, catch up, and form new bonds with conference newbies. Indeed, the IFYEs made everything feel magical and continued the motto of “Peace through Understanding”

Next year’s European IFYE conference is scheduled for Estonia from July 23-30 in Jõulumäe, Pärnumaa

World IFYE Board

This is a report on planning progress for the 2018 World IFYE Conference. A rotation scheme was determined at the 2003 World IFYE Conference in Sigtuna, Sweden that identified Africa as the 2018 site to be followed by North America in 2023 and Middle East in 2028.

Current status is that the U.S.A. IFYE Association is coordinating with Uganda 4-H Organization to host the 2018 World IFYE Conference in Kampala, Uganda. Global Adrenaline in Evanston, Illinois will assist with logistics, marketing, and registration process. Global Adrenaline will offer pre- and post-conference tours to anyone interested.

Dale and Crystal Yonker met with Global Adrenaline representatives in their Evanston offices on 8 June 2015 to discuss Uganda weather, security (both health and physical) plus mitigation suggestions, diplomatic history between Uganda and Western Countries, significant news events, tourist attractions, and entry Visa requirements. Global Adrenaline manages similar activities for Harvard University Business School students in both Rwanda and Uganda.

The World IFYE Board set a condition that the U.S.A. IFYE Association must be satisfied that sufficient definition in conference plans is available or North America would advance in the rotation scheme to 2018. Coordination with the Uganda 4-H Organization is very slow and we are attempting to find another point of contact with which to work. I have established November as the date to make a recommendation to the U.S.A. IFYE Association Board on viability of Uganda plans, I recently identified this information to attendees at the European IFYE Conference General Membership Meeting. We should be thinking of a contingency plan to determine which state IFYE Association could take the lead in organizing a 2018 World IFYE Conference.
